Excerpt: . chapter X Agencies and Methods Those who are engaged in Christian work for youth are sometimes repelled and disheartened by the impossible demands made upon them in the name of scientific method. A conception of that work, however, which makes it pursue the evangelistic aim throughout by educational appeals to the naturally unfolding powers of the soul, will go far to fit the scientific demands to the practical situation. Progress will come smoothly where it is agreed, on the one hand, that religious education in the formative years of youth is not to waste precious time in the non-religious study of religion, --the scientific study of the history and philosophy of religion, of ethics and Christian evidences, of the historical and literary criticism of the Bible, and such like subjects, is for later years--on the other hand, that reliance for making disciples of the youth is to be placed chiefly on their educational treatment, not on sentimental influences or emotional appeals. This conception of religious work for young people has already in fact been widely adopted. It is being discovered that the principles and methods to which the church has been brought by the experience of the last century are in essence identical with the principles and methods to which we are shut up by the psychological and pedagogical requirements of youth. The educationalevangelistic ideal is already implicit in the prevailing conception and organization of religious work; its explicit adoption calls for no overturning...
