O a Poem I am indebted for my existence. Thus she will some day say whose name gives the title to this book, when she will be informed in her riper years what has been written here by her father. But she will also be justified in saying, --A ministerial decree, issued in 1850 by the late Prussian Minister, Van der B Heydt, way be regarded as the first cause which brought about my entrance into the world. And further--Had not, ten years later, a gunpowder explosion taken place at Mayence (1857), I very likely should never have seen the light. How these Three Events are connected, and what a remarkable part accident has played, will become more evident in what I have to say in the course of my autobiography. The reason why I go to some length in my narrative is, because without doing so, those little causes, with their great effects, could not be well understood. I am, therefore, obliged to begin with myself, and shall endeavour to relate every necessary and important fact. I was born September 8th, 1827, at Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle), being the eldest son of the town-clerk (Bürgermeisterei Secretair) of that place. My mother, Theeese Mattheiem, was the daughter of a locksmith, whose widow was living there. Both my parents (who are still living) were musical, that is to say, they possessed the usual modicum of musical knowledge. To hear my mother sing, accompanied by my father...
