Of the total number of youths who have been admitted, two have married, one of whom works on the farm, the other for a neighbouring gentleman; four have been placed out in good situations; three, having absented themselves without leave, were not taken back; one left owing to ill health, and afterwards died; five are now at the farm. None have misconducted themselves nor been discharged for any fault. In connection with these arrangements for the boarding of the farm servants who live in the house, two advantages are provided for the other labourers. A cup of cocoa is given to every person employed on the farm at the time appointed for the beginning of work; and during the winter months nourishing soup is offered to those who choose to pay for it, at the rate of one-halfpenny per quart, which covers the actual...
